Capped by one of the most famous speeches ever written, King Henry V recalls the momentous English victory at Agincourt. With comic sub-plots to be found among Henry's soldiers, the production boasts some terrific performances - including Sam Cox as the 'splendidly unhinged' Pistol (Telegraph). In the title role is Jamie Parker, who 'casts such a rapt spell that you feel the entire audience would rise up to march behind him.' (Independent)

- Broadcast into cinemas worldwide in May 2013.
- Henry V was the play that opened the current Globe theatre.
- Shakespeare's masterpiece of the turbulence of war and the arts of peace.
- A traditional period costume performance.
- Features Jamie Parker as Henry V, already acclaimed for his role as Hal in Henry IV Parts I & II at the Globe in 2010.
- Extra features include: Cast gallery.

What the press said:

“Dominic Dromgoole's revival of Henry V may be conventional, but it works a treat.” The Telegraph

“...Jamie Parker plays the audience wonderfully as a hard but fair king.” The Standard
